

The FCC should let satellite radio offer any local content that it wants. If the members of the National Association of Broadcasters feel it hurts them, then let the open market decide what survives. If you limit satellite radio on what they can offer, then you are seriously hurting the customers choice. I should not be forced to listen to a traditional radio station in order to hear local content. We should have free choice on where we get our information. Please tell the NAB to shut up and stop fighting satellite radio. I'm tired of them getting in the way of the free market.
